1. [REDACTED] were in to talk with me about the housing situation in [REDACTED] and the new housing regulation which will become effective on 1 January 1963. Lock was against the whole thing and requested a blanket exception for the [REDACTED]. I declined. We discussed this at some length, and I explained to Lock the philosophy behind our new regulation. I told him that it might well be that [REDACTED] had an exception situation and that, if this were the case, he should come up with a recommended modification of the existing formula which would not violate the principles underlying it, i.e., to require the employee to pay enough of the excess to make it important to him to try to find something within or close to the allowances. I also told Lock that, if it would help him, I would be glad to send somebody to [REDACTED] to look into this situation firsthand.

2. With Jim Garrison and [REDACTED] I visited [REDACTED] (There is still a lot to do there but the critical hurdles have been made, and I think there is no doubt that we can move NPIC into the building prior to the end of the year. [REDACTED] is going to meet tomorrow with the contractor and others, at which time certain final decisions will be made. While furniture is already being placed in the building, we cannot move NPIC operations into the building without putting on our special security controls. Work by the contractor will be most difficult after those controls are in effect since all workers would have to be escorted. This argues for postponement of the actual move of operations until 31 December.) I emphasized to Bill that I would much prefer to move earlier, say, on 26 December; but if the contractor insists that he does not want to turn over the building until 31 December, which he has a right to do under his contract, we would have no alternative but to agree, in which case we should move on this date (31 December).
